Theme for illustrated Lecture at Conference in Jacksonville, Fla.

New York, March 4.—Storles of children who work in the glass, cotton and coal industries for the children who live normal lives will be told by child orators while stereopticon slide illustrations are shown at the annual conference of the national child labor committee, to be held at Jacksonville, Fla. March 13 to 16. Announcement of this feature of the program of the convention is made at the headquarters of the committee here.

This is the first time the national child labor committee has taken child labor and poverty as the general topic of its conference, and heretofore no attempt has been made to interest children who play in those who work. The announcement says the committee is coming to realize that the campaign of education must be turned in the direction of the little citizens who will take until she is in receipt of some official notlication from Rome."

The Marquise de Castellane, Count Boni's mother, received the correspondent at the De Castellane home, 27 Rue Constantine. The marquise, to whom and to her husband Anna Gould forerly allowed $50,000 a year, said:

"The decision pleased us very much, indeed. It is not that we wish any harm to Anna Gould, for her husband and I were very fond of her. She has made mistakes, but we can forgive her, for Eoni has made some, too. Boni has won his case by being able to produce three witnesses who testified that Anna Gould's consent to the marriage was only conditional; these witnesses heard her remarks the day before the wedding.

"Boni would never have instituted these proceedings had Anna remained simple, for it was his one purpose in
